DISTRESSING SHIPWRECK.

Portland, (Maine,) Dec. 16. Captain Archibald Hall, of St. George, called Captain Archibaid Hall, of St. George, called on us on Monday last, and gave an account of his recent sufferings by shipwreck, from which we have prepared the following statement—

Capt. H. sailed from Boston 22d of September in the sloop Sally, of St. George, bound to Machiae. His crew consisted of two young lads, 17 or 18 years old; and he had on board two female passengers belonging to Machias. After leaving Boston they soon experienced very rough and bois ferous weather; and after being out 26 days, while scudding under bare poles in a violent gale, they lost both their mast and rudder, from which time they drifted at the mercy of the winds and waves, 21 days longer, before they were taken off from the wreck. Having but a small store of provisions on board, and no hope of reaching land unless some vessel should fortunately fall in with them, they immediately put themselves on a short allowance. In a few days they found their store of provisious reduced to nine biscuits. Upon this morsel those five persons lived so sparingly as to make it last 14 days. At last the biscuit failed, and no help appeared. Their only sustenance now two or three rats, which they were so fortunate as to obtain by means of a cat which they had on board; and finally they feasted their famished bodies on These means of sustenance finally failed them, and still there was no prospect of relief. They had hitherto been obliged to keep one hand at the pump most of the time, to prevent the vessel from sinking. But they were now so weak as to be scarcely able to walk. Three days longer they survived, without the least sustenance, save what they obtained from an old beef bone, which they boiled over five times, and drank the liquor, which became slightly nutritive by means of the marrow and fat of the bone. Two days before they were relieved, a brig hove in sight—their dying hearts revived within them, and their half gla-zed eyes beained with hope. The big drew near; she was not more than half a mile distant; she hauled to the wind, threw back her topsails, and appeared to be watching the wreck. With longing eyes the dying sufferers wanted to see the boat lowered into the water—But whilst they watched, behold she filled her sails, kept on her course, and was out of sight. Then came the hour of despair, and with feelings unutterable, they dragged out another agonizing day. Another morning arrived. Hunger had now driven them to the last resort.— One must perish to preserve the lives of the others a little longer. Who that one should be they ers a little longer. Who that one should be they solemnly agreed to determine the next day, at 12 o'clock, if Providence should not sooner interpose in their behalf. But they were not left to this sad extremity. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the brig Daniel, Capt. Lawton, of Dartmouth, (Eng.) appeared in sight, came to their relief, took them from the wreck, and carried them to St. Johns. Newfoundland; where they were treated with the greatest possible kindness, by the citizens, as well as by Capt. L. They were furnished with an abundance of cloathing and money, and after their strength was sufficiently restored, they took passage for their homes, in this state, where they

THE NATIVITY.

'Tis midnight-O'er Judea's plains A more than mortal stillness reigns: The starry host, in squadrons bright, Glow in the firmament of night, And shepherds watch their sleeping fold, Beneath that arch of fretted gold-When lo! a stream of glorious light Burst in celestial splendour there, And gave to their astonished sight A scraph visitant of air— Radiant in beam ineffable, The herald-angel stood confest, And thus, in liquid sweetness fell The accents of the heavenly guest: "Fear not-to you and all mankind, Glad tidings of great joy I bring, In David's city ye shall find A new-born Saviour, Christ and King; A manger is his humble bed, And where the Virgin-Mother keeps Her vigils round his holy head, E'en there the World's Redeemer sleeps." He spake-attending Seraphim

Confirm the mission from above And countless thousands swell the hymn Of triumph, and Redeeming Love-Oh! who but they, whose gifted eyes Were blessed with this apocalypse,

Can speak the angelic harmonies Of golden harps and cherub lips!
The hierarchy of heaven again
Pour'd jubilant th' exulting strain. As at Creation's birth And thus the lofty prelude ran,

And peace to all on earth." And peace to all on earth."
Unveil'd appear'd the glittering throng.
Salvation's boon their joyful song,
While hallelujahs fill the sky
And hail the day-spring from on highAnd truth and mercy met—inspire
The strains of this celestial choir; Slowly recede the heavenly host,

And dying echoes soft and clear, Melf into silence on the ear, As in the realms of light the pageantry is less. Poulson's American.

JUDGE CHASE'S ADDRESS. The following address of the Hon. I. Chase to General Lafayette, was received last week but too late for insertion in Thursday, paper:

General Lafayette.

The citizens of Annapolis, ardently Solicitous to demonstrate the feelings of their hears on this happy accasion, have requested the you—Welcome General Lafayette, arice welcome, as the rered guest of the citizens of Annapolis, the citizens rejoice to see you, polis; the citizens rejoice to see you, they rejoice to see you as the friend of America, they rejoice to see you as the friend of the illustrious Washington— They rejoice to see you receiving the congravilations of a free people; whose hearts from one end of the continent to the other, are filled with the most lively gratitude, for the great, the imper-tion services rendered by you in the revolutionary war. To you, illustrious chief, they are indebted for that aid you afforded, at a time the most perilous, by which, under the favour and smiles of Providence, and under the guidance of the patriotic Washington, the freedom and independence of America were established. To you and your glorious achieve-ments they owe those rights, which they re now in the full enjoyment of-Lierty, the rights of conscience, the rights of property, and the security of all personal rights, and that high and exalted station America holds among the nations of the earth. Your noble, your disibterested conduct, as the devoted friend of liberty, and your timely aid in her cause, will long be remembered by Americans. They are deeply engraven, indelibly impressed, on their hearts, and will be transmitted on facir hearts, and will be transmitted from father to son, from generation to generation, until America shall be lost and swallowed up in the never ceasing flood of time.

May the Almight God, the great leaves take and into his holy keeping.

Jehovah, take you into his holy keeping, prolong your days, and may they be prosperous and end in peace, that peace of mind which passeth all understandng; and may you finally be fitted for and received into those mansions of bliss prepared by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for his happy followers, is the ardent prayer of the sons of free-

To the above address General La-fayette rede the following REPLY:

The welcome I receive from you, gentlemen, in the name of the citizens of Annapolis, the pleasure to meet you again, my dear and venerated sir, and the remembrance of one of my earliest friends, and co-patriots, in the cause of America, your excellent brother, are sentiments which I am happy to express. I thank you for the testimonies of your esteem and friendship. I rejoice with you in the admirable results of our glorious revolution, and feel an affectionate eagerness to re-enter the metropolis where I am so kindly invited, and where so many old obligations have been conferred upon me.

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Courier says—"There was a little skirmishing on Sunday week, at Blade sburg, between two gentlemen belonging to a foreign legation.—They fought with swords and were both slightly wounded. The particulars which led to the transaction has not transpired."

The king continues to publish decrees intended to repair the losses sustained by the royalists during his captivity, and to restore various branches of the administration to their former condition.

Vessels arriving in Spain from America after the 15th of November were to be quarantined or admitted freely, according to the health of their crews and the nature of their papers.

The King allawed inhabitants of Spain and the delacent islands one month to bring their colonial merchandize from Gibralts; and two months.

to bring it from other ports. A meeting was to be held at Cadiz by the owners, insurers, &c. of the ships San Kernando, Vigarrona, and Veloz, the brig Hercules, and schr. Fame, stataned in Mahon by fear of the Algerines, to consider what measures should be taken en with regard to them.

Gibraltar, Oct. 23.—An American squadron, under command of Com-creighton, composed of a frigate, a sloop of war, and a schooner, has ar-rived there in 16 days from Algiers, by which we have a confirmation of the sailing of the Algerine neet about a month ago. On the 19th, a fright & a brig of war passed here towards the ocean, without any flag; and it would not be strange if they belonged to those pirates.—N. Y. Daily Adv.
